1. How can the observance of an oscillatory difference in a patient population help us develop more effective treatments?